INDIANA COUNTY WILL ADD INTERESTING FEATURES TO THE STATE FARM SHOW

Gordon Dramatic Club, County Horseshoe Pitching Champion, R. H. Thompson and Clark Pollock Will Compete for Honors

The Gordon Dramatic Club of Blacklick township, who won the inter-county tournament at Blairsville will represent Westmoreland and Indiana county at the State Farm Show at Harrisburg, December 15-19. The eighteen plays will be put on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of Farm Show week, January 17, 18 and 19. Six plays from western Pennsylvania will compete with each other, six plays from central Pennsylvania will be in another district and six from eastern Pennsylvania in another.

County Agent Warner made a mistake in announcing that admission to the plays would be free. There is an admission charge of ten cents to the auditorium. Therefore anyone wishing to attend and see all eighteen plays would be out of pocket only 10c. The Gordon Dramatic performers are already making plans for their trip to Harrisburg.

Leland Pfeiffer, the county horse shoe pitching champion, will represent Indiana county on Thursday and Friday at the Farm Show. There is no admission charge to the State Farm Show. It is the largest winter farm show in America, and is certainly worth while for anyone to attend. The meetings of all the state agricultural organizations are held at that time, and excellent programs are put on.

The poultry show is now the largest of any show east of the Mississippi river. Indiana county is usually represented by exhibitors in the milk show. Some of the 4-H club members exhibit potatoes and corn. Several farmers exhibit turkeys and chickens and several other farmers exhibit small grains.

R. H. Thompson, of Home, will exhibit two registered Duroc Jersey sows which will also be sold in the auction sale. Clark C. Pollock, of Marion Center, and Doyle Stutzman, of Cramer, who produced certified seed potatoes this past year, will exhibit.

Those attending the Farm Show will experience no difficulty in securing rooms in private homes at about $1.00 per night. There are restaurants and cafeterias in the show building.

County Agent Warner can furnish anyone with premium lists and entry blanks. Programs for the meetings will also soon be available.

J. F. POUNDS RE-ELECTED HEAD OF EXTENSION ASSOCIATION

Interesting Reports Made at Annual Meeting Held Here on Friday

At the annual meeting of the Indiana County Agricultural Extension Association at the Presbyterian church on Friday, John F. Pounds of White township, was re-elected president; M. C. Stewart, of Center township, vice president; J. M. Risinger, of Homer City, secretary, and Clarence McHenry, of White township, treasurer.

Reports were made by the secretary and treasurer, and an address by Mr. Pounds. The different members of the executive committee reported on extension activities through out the county and also gave brief talks on several products in which they were interested. Six of the women reported on home economics clubs and demonstrations, and an exhibit of baked goods and clothing was also displayed.

An appetizing dinner was served at noon by the ladies of the John F. Pounds Sunday school class of the church. The ladies certainly served an excellent meal, with some extra finishing touches in honor of their teacher, who was also chairman of the meeting yesterday.

Greetings were brought from Jefferson county by Harry Poorbaubb, assistant County Agent in the county. John B. Flenniken, speaking for the County Commissioners, complimented the extension organization on the constructive features of the program and also on the fact that the farmers are taking care of themselves in these times when there are so many out-stretched hands.

The potato growers quartette, composed of J. Paul Hopkins, Marion Center; H. O. Kimmel, Sheloceta; C. H. McCall and J. F. Pounds, of Indiana, R. D. 5, with Mrs. Pounds at the piano, rendered several appropriate numbers of their own composition. From the excellent rendition of their numbers, they will doubtless be called upon to appear at the state potato growers banquet during the Farm Show at Harrisburg in January.

Howard G. Niesley, assistant director of agricultural extension at State College, gave a very interesting address on methods of extension teaching. He used a number of charts showing the results of surveys made to determine the most effective methods of teaching and securing attendance at meetings and demonstrations.

Reports of the year's work were also made by Miss Bessie Owen, extension representative in home economics and by County Agent J. W. Warner.

Outside painting should be done only in dry weather.

Winter Farm Courses

To Start January 4
Short courses in agriculture at the Pennsylvania State College will open January 4 and close March 1, 1934. Dean R. L. Watts of the School of Agriculture announces. Anyone who has an average grammar school education is eligible to attend.

These winter courses are designed especially for those who cannot spend four, or even two years in college but who desire to become familiar with the very latest agricultural information and practices. The success of hundreds of former winter course men and women, including some of the master farmers of the state, prove the value of this type of education.

Subjects offered the first half of the winter course are: animal diseases, dairy cattle feeding and management, economic problems of the farmer, farm forestry, farm machinery, farm slaughtering, feeding farm animals, floral arrangements, forage crops, fruit growing, fruit and vegetable insects, greenhouse maintenance and flower production, judging farm poultry, livestock breeding and selection, marketing poultry products, poultry housing and equipment, soil management and fertility, testing dairy products and vegetable gardening.

For the second half the subjects include: cereals, cow testing associations and advanced registry, dairy cattle feeding and management, farm forestry, farm management, fruit growing, judging dairy cattle, livestock management, plant diseases, potatoes, poultry breeding and diseases, poultry feeding, rural life, soil management and fertility, and vegetable gardening.

Farm Extension News Published in County Papers Proves Interesting to Former Residents in Other States

County Farm Agent Warner is convinced that his Farm Extension News published in the county papers, is not only read with interest in this immediate territory, but also attracts the attention of former residents of the county residing in other states. Following the publication of his story of the meat cutting demonstrations last week, he received a request from Vincent Sekac, a former resident of Blairsville, for Bulletin No. 118 on "Market Meats."

Daily Walks in Winter

Bring Health and Vigor

"The comforts of the present day home in winter time are exceedingly alluring to many. Snug in an over-cushioned chair, with the indoor temperature hovering around 74 degrees, thousands of persons imagine they have the drop on Old Jack Frost when in reality that old fellow has the drop on them. Victims of the 'softer' attitude, this type of person pampers himself and thus snubs the great gifts that winter can bestow," states Dr. Theodore B. Appel, Secretary of Health.

"While our forefathers were victims of diseases, the cause and cure of which were in many instances yet unknown, they most certainly were not luxury devotees. In the pioneer days there was no luxury living. Consequently, by necessity, they were on a decidedly more friendly basis with cold weather and in fact all kinds of weather. They profited thereby. They were indeed a hardy group; and a lesson can be learned by their experience.

"The crisp, even bitter tang of winter winds contain a wealth of health for those who are willing to step up and take it. In fact, the long walk on a cold day if regularly indulged in after office hours or after the matinee bridge game, will build health and 'red blood' in a way quite impossible when tonics and a super-heated room are relied upon for this accomplishment.

"The flush of youth, and incidentally the vibrancy associated with that glorious period of life, will in many instances be recaptured by the thousands who now, like bears, are hibernating in their luxury caves, if they will step up to Old Man Winter, make him a daily friend, and take in terms of health and vigor what he will gladly bestow.

"Why not give winter a break? Step up to it and winter it. Leave the 'cream puff,' fire-hugging and debilitating luxury habits at least for an hour or more each day and meet winter face to face. There is a lot of health in this suggestion."

Quality Maintained

RECENT years have seen considerable reductions in the cost of commodities and service in all lines. The public has learned to expect lower prices. It is important, however, to see that these reductions are legitimate, and not effected by a sacrifice of quality.

It is one thing to buy at a lower price when quality remains the same, and quite another to accept inferior merchandise or service offered as a "bargain."

Our charges for merchandise and service are lower today than they have been in many years, but the reduction is the result of lower costs and economies in management. We refuse to sacrifice our high standards of quality and mislead our clients with "savings" which are only apparent.
