13. MARTIN BURTON⁴ CRAIG (CATHERINE ARNETTA 'NETTA³ ANDERSON, CATHERINE² RAY, JOHN¹) was born January 10, 1885 in Parkwood., Indiana Co., PA, and died August 16, 1966 in Indiana, PA. He married MARGARET MYRTILLA HOLSTEIN September 20, 1905 in Parkwood, PA, daughter of ROBERT HOLSTEIN and MARTHA COULTER. She was born August 04, 1883 in Young Twp., Indiana Co., PA, and died June 06, 1969 in Cameron's Scenery Hill home, Indiana, PA.

Notes for MARTIN BURTON CRAIG:

Bert was a farmer and coal miner. He worked in the coal mines at McIntyre for 21 1/2 years. After he retired from the coal mines, he spent time in fruit farming. They owned a home in Parkwood, PA.

Celebrated 60th Wedding Anniversary at Parkwood Grange Hall.

He belonged to local McIntyre United Miners Workers Union.

Merle Craig also emphasizes the validity of the father-son tradition in the mines:

Was I scared the first time I went underground? Of course I was. On my very first day, my dad took me in with him to remove some of the pillars in a finished room in my grandfather's mine. Now pulling pillars is very dangerous work and usually reserved for experienced men. This job entailed knocking down the pillars of coal left in each room to help support the roof while the men were working in it. After all available coal was taken out of the seam in that place, the pillars were pulled one by one and that coal loaded out. By the time you were done, the roof was held up only by the timbers.

Well that day, we had so many supports to remove that my dad couldn't understand why the room hadn't caved in already. We kept at that job for a week or so. The roof was so bad by when that I could hear the coal cracking and as the ribs started to buckle, lumps began to shoot across the room. The timbers were splitting the crumbling all around us and the whole place was rumbling like thunder, I kept saying to my dad, who was working very calmly with a pick and shovel, 'Dad, don't you think we'd better get out of here' Finally, just as I thought I couldn't stand it any longer, he got up, turned to me and announced: 'Well, I guess we'd better leave.' Just as we got to the main heading, the whole thing let loose. There was enough air pressure from the fall to nearly knock us over out in the main entry. But I trusted my dad, who was a very experienced miner and could tell from the sounds exactly when the roof would fall.

Notes for MARGARET MYRTILLA HOLSTEIN:
"Over The River & Through The Woods"
In Memory
Of
Margaret Myrtilla Holstein
1883 - 1969

It was only the natural thing for us to do. Each Christmas we were rushed out of bed early and hustled to open our gifts. After we finished opening our special treasures it was off to Grandmother's house we go.

I don't recall there ever being a discussion about it - it was the thing we did. Indeed, we very much looked forward to it. The trip from Kent [Jacksonville] and Parkwood was a wonderful example of the song by which I named this peace. Grandmother [Margaret Myrtilla Holstein] was always glad to see us and would welcome us like we were the only ones there. This could never be the case at Christmas though. There were increasing numbers as the years wore on and the noise level rose to punctuate its being part of who we were. We were Craigs! Craigs had fun and were sometimes noisy as we gathered. Thinking about what was a annual occasion brings up a rather spotted memory of all that we did and how we entertained ourselves. One thing we knew early on was that there would be a gift for each of us under the tree that always stood in the corner of the back room -- the room where the old roll-top-desk stood. That desk always fascinated me.

We were shooed out of the house when the weather permitted and on the occasions when it didn't, we were confined to the house. One of the magic things about the old homestead at Parkwood was the spiral stairwell that went up stairs. It wasn't anything but magic to all of us. Louise, Gerald, myself and all the others would find ways to entertain each one of the many grandchildren. Things just don't work today like they did back then. Children today demand front and center in all gatherings and adults are unable to communicate as they once did. Back then children were to be seen and not heard. Simple as that. No questions, just seen and not heard.

Louise, with her natural motherly instincts, would generally take the lead and get us to play house. Granddad, having raised 11 children in such a small house, didn't raise any slackers. So I reckon that we took the example from our mothers and fathers and acted accordingly. As the years wore on [1940 - 1950s], there were more and more grand children. We would be allowed to play on the spiral stair case and the one large upstairs room.

The outhouse was the only place to take care of business so one can well imagine the long waits there. It seems to me, as I write this, there were times when the weather was nice enough we would be allowed to play outside. If there was snow some would bring sleds but their use was discouraged for some reason or another. Seems like we were told that there were some bad people down over the hill.

Getting back on that item concerning where everyone slept at the Craig house in Parkwood . . . where exactly did the eight boys and 3 girls sleep at night. As well as I can take my mind's eye and with my head in my hands picture nearly anything they had in the house. I can tell you rather closely exactly where things were. As one walked in the side door and if one looked to the door post to the right there hung a rather menacing raiser strap. Its usage was explained and demonstrated to us - and were quite content with Grandfathers expiation. No one put another question to the subject. We believed what he said and in most cases we spent the day with that one item in the back of our mind. The house stood two stories high with a cellar door [too many splinters to slide on - although some tried]. Just inside the side door was a sort of sun room with a couch that would generally hold three men. It was the room you stayed close to if you wanted to listen ["LISTEN"]. Those were the days when children learned a great deal by simply listening to what was going on - and wouldn't have dared but in or even whisper. Some of the stories told in that one room would be so valuable today. If there was anything important enough so as to make persistence gainful the child with the question would go to his parent and whisper - better yet, go to mom and get her to pose the question.

Concerning where all the Craigs Slept: I am wondering if the farm back over the hill from near where Tom & Ruth Redinger raised their children had a larger house and might have been used early on. I have never heard the Old Farm discussed except briefly when we went hunting there and another time in the 1950's when granddad took us back to see the tree farm he was tending there. Question: When did all the MB Craigs move to the Parkwood Homestead. Although it is established that the family was raised in Parkwood, there must have been a time and reason they abandoned the Old [and larger?] Farm.

Getting back to the house. But first, the "the out-house" was located down the sidewalk about 25 yards from the house. I don't recall when it was that running water and other utilities were added to the house. The homestead also had a small [maybe 6' X 6'] out building just outside the side door. It had a roof and the sides were built of lattice work. I am assuming that this may have been a pump house. Inside there was that wonderful old "party-line" telephone that rung on the wall and was it ever used! On straight in was the largest room of the house. The large table there usually kept the great dishes of food Uncles and Aunts brung for the feast that was to come.

At some time Grandmother would go to the Organ that was in the room facing the road and proceed to play some Christmas music. This was such a memorable and lasting experience for each one of us. She did right well as best as I can remember. Her playing the Pump Organ most likely was the influence I needed to get started with the Saxophone. But, we would stand around that organ and sing Christmas Carols for long lengths of time.

After the singing we children were relocated to the up-stairs in bad weather or outside when the sun was shining. The adults would eat and when they finished we would rush back in like Napoleon's army. The food was always good, and more than enough for everyone. If the children had been able to eat with the adults I cannot even imagine the noise and confusion. This arrangement continued as long as I can remember. Often the men would then settle out in the basement room under the barn to continue on with stories I found so intriguing, yet too young to understand - and was sometimes told that my presence wasn't desired there. The year the barn burnt down we had no place to go to play or for the men to talk. Grandad revealed some ideas he was kicking around and they stepped off some measurements. As best as I recall, it wouldn't be a barn, but a garage with plenty of space for all his tools.

So many wonderful memories came into being there in Parkwood. O, how much I would love to go back in time and record the wonderful stories they shared there. Back in those days, only being a child, I had no idea what Genealogy is, or what a tree is, much less understand what they were talking about. I dare say heavy eyelids would force my mind into inactivity and those things are gone forever.

Time moved along and soon it was quite clear that the massive numbers of grandchildren became more of a burden for grandmother and grandad, so we began to draw names. I loved this. We didn't get together much during the year but one could play the game, "Who Got My Name?" all year long. And, it went well. I don't know that I ever found out who had my name. It was so much fun. Grandmother still tried to have some special little things for as many as she could.

Notes for CLARENCE MERLE CRAIG:

Merle Craig of Indiana remembers driving a mule in the Puxsiana mine near West Lebanon:

I worked there on weekends and summer vacations while I was in high school. Now, I was a pretty ambitious kid ordinarily, but one day I found myself wondering if it might not be easier to drive the mule than it was shoveling coal out of six inches of water. So one day when the regular driver got drunk and didn't show up for work, I got my chance. You had to drive the mule to each room, and pull the cars out to the main track for the motor to pick up. Nell, this mule was like most mules; he started or stopped only when he wanted to. And there were no brakes on those cars. You had to stop them by throwing a sprag into the spokes of the wheel. If the car got off the track, there you were in the dark all alone, and you were expected to get a car loaded with a ton of coal back on the track. And the mule was no help at all in that situation! I decided that driving the mule was much worse than shoveling coal, although I stuck the day out.

Spraggers and motormen were also an unknown luxury to young boys who worked in old-time mines as doorboys, sometimes known as "trappers." Trappers, from the earliest days of the industry until the World War I era, were among the lowest-paid underground workers, usually averaging around $1.60 per day. According to a state law enacted in 1915, no boy under 16 could be employed in a coal mine, but Ben Trunzo went to work as a trapper boy when he was 14:

I didn't want my dad to know I was working; he thought I was too young. So I got a job as a doorboy. I worked from 7:30 in the morning until 3:30. That way, I was home and cleaned up before he got there. My dad didn't find out for quite a while because he worked twelve hours a day at Sagamore drying sand for the motors to use -- sand was sprinkled on the rails to help gain traction going up or down a grade. Trappers were responsible for the opening and closing of underground ventilation doors. In those old mines, they had a system of doors between sections to direct the flow of air. Air was supposed to go up the main haulage and back to the fan. So a trapper sat all day by his door with an oil lamp on his cap. There was a 'manhole' -- a shelter hole in the wall by the track. The motorman would blink his motor light at me, and I'd throw the switch and open the door for him. Then, I'd jump into the manway until he was past, and run out and close the door. A trip would come along about every hour. Was I bored or lonely? Well, it was my job.

Then as now, adequate ventilation of the mines was one of the most important safety factors, and in addition to doorboys, many other men were employed to keep the air flowing freely. While in the earliest days of mining history, fans were used to blow fresh air into the mines, mining engineers soon discovered that this method only served to force explosive gases back into the workings. Merle Craig also adds that "at one time, some companies experimented with huge furnaces placed outside a separate air shaft to draw out bad air from inside the mines."

As mining methods progressed, however, trained corps of vent men, bratticemen, and masons built underground airways kept flowing by huge fans housed outside the mines in brick shelters. As an individual mine attained greater proportions, specially designed air shafts were sunk to provide additional oxygen.

While many boys entered the mines as doorboys, most went in with their fathers to learn their mining skills from the best teacher available.

"One of the reasons men took their boys into the mines," says Ben Trunzo, "was to get more cars to load. A man alone could get only four or five cars a day, but if you had a son with you, you might get ten or even twelve.

Merle Craig also emphasizes the validity of the father-son tradition in the mines:

Was I scared the first time I went underground? Of course I was. On my very first day, my dad took me in with him to remove some of the pillars in a finished room in my grandfather's mine. Now pulling pillars is very dangerous work and usually reserved for experienced men. This job entailed knocking down the pillars of coal left in each room to help support the roof while the men were working in it. After all available coal was taken out of the seam in that place, the pillars were pulled one by one and that coal loaded out. By the time you were done, the roof was held up only by the timbers.

Well that day, we had so many supports to remove that my dad couldn't understand why the room hadn't caved in already. We kept at that job for a week or so. The roof was so bad by when that I could hear the coal cracking and as the ribs started to buckle, lumps began to shoot across the room. The timbers were splitting the crumbling all around us and the whole place was rumbling like thunder. I kept saying to my dad, who was working very calmly with a pick and shovel, 'Dad, don't you think we'd better get out of here' Finally, just as I thought I couldn't stand it any longer, he got up, turned to me and announced: 'Well, I guess we'd better leave.' Just as we got to the main heading, the whole thing let loose. There was enough air pressure from the fall to nearly knock us over out in the main entry. But I trusted my dad, who was a very experienced miner and could tell from the sounds exactly when the roof would fall.

Ultimately, the hard-won coal, dragged out to the daylight by mule, rope or motor haulage, found its way to the tipples. There, another battalion of workers prepared it for shipment to factories, iron foundries, or for further processing as coke. Most of the group of outside workers were classified as "company men," who were paid by the day, as opposed to the miners who worked on a tonnage basis. The most important of these are easily picked out from the old record books: "The 'dock boss'," says Andy Haggerty, "checked the outgoing cars for dirty coal. If the dock boss discovered two or three buckets of slate among the coal, he'd give that miner a couple days off, without pay of course."

The weighboss, another company man, then weighed the coal and credited the tonnage to the man whose name coincided with the number of the small metal "check" hung on the side of the car. Later, a union-hired checkweighman assisted with this job. In some mines, a "check boy" collected the checks and replaced them on pegboard for the miners to claim the next working day. After weighing, the loaded cars were pulled up into the tipples and "tipped" over onto a slowly moving conveyor. In the days before cleaning plants, "boney pickers" labored inside the tipples to remove by hand small pieces of slate, rock and sulphur missed by the dock boss. "This job," observes Merle Craig, "paid so little that usually young boys and older men performed this task. "Also, it sometimes attracted a certain unambitious class of men who required only enough money to keep themselves in liquor. "The term 'boney picker' came to be used as slang to denote a person who is lazy." Before elaborate conveyor systems, the refuse set aside by the boney pickers were taken out to the dump by another employee called a "slate wheeler" or "rock larryman." After "picking", Andy Haggerty continues, "the railroad cars, called 'flats,' were swept out by the 'flat cleaner,' and pushed under the tipples by the 'car dropper' to be loaded with clean coal."

At some old tipples, "they had as many as five tracks underneath, one each for 'run of mine' coal -- that means just as the coal comes from the mine after being cleaned -- and four other flats waiting to be filled with different sizes: slack, nut, egg, and lump. "In another step before cars were sent to their destinations, the "trimmer" went to work to level off the cars neatly in anticipation of a long and bumpy railroad ride. Of all company men, the "fireboss" carried one of the heaviest burdens of responsibility. "Each day before he went into the mine," explains Andy Haggerty, who performed this task countless times, "he'd check a barometer kept in the lamp house.

"If the barometer fell, he'd know that gas was probably liberating freely underground, as outside barometric pressure affected conditions in the mine. "Then, three hours before the start of each shift, the fireboss had to inspect each working place and all adjacent places in the mine with an approved flame safety lamp. "The flame safety lamp was held up close to the roof, and if the flame inside elongated, there was gas present. "You had to be real careful how you pulled the lamp back down. If you jerked it suddenly, the flame could burst through the protective gauze and cause an explosion.

"As each place passed his inspection, the fireboss chalked the date and his initials on each working place in the mine. And after he got outside, he had to sign a book reporting that the mine was in a safe condition. "If he found gas, then warning signs had to be put up across each entrance, working place, or other dangerous section of the mine, and the men kept out until the mine was safe."Another job the fireboss did was to check for bad roof. "He'd test it -- 'sound the roof' -- with a special brass-tipped stick, and if it sounded "drummy", that meant the strata was separating. Then he'd send for the timbermen, who would come in and set more props.

"A real good fireboss could hold his fingers against the roof as he sounded it and tell whether it was four inches or three feet thick, and just what kind of condition it was in. "In the real old days, before the fireboss," Andy adds, " there was a fellow they called a 'fireman.' "This man also went into the mines early to check for gas, but if he found any, he'd 'brush' it away with his jacket, or burn it out with his carbide lamp! "That horrifies us today but I guess it worked well enough if the gas in very small amounts." Other company men and supervisors included a track boss, who directed the laying of track up the main haulage. Track-laying, of the utmost importance in the removal of coal from underground to the surface, was often complicated by the "heaving of the bottom." "This," says Haggerty, "means that sometimes the floor of the mines actually buckles up, caused by a settling of rock strata."

Towns, like people, pass through several stages in the course of a lifetime, and by the 1930s, more changes were in store for Iselin. C. Merle Craig, who grew up in the West Lebanon area, went to work in Iselin in 1930 as Chief Clerk in the mine office. "It was non-union then," he remembers, "and a lot of picketing was going on." In addition to labor-management problems, economic hardship also struck the town about the same time. "By 1932 it was common for the mines to be operating only two days per month due to lack of demand for coal." Merle still feels that the good spirits retained by the people of Iselin during these dark days was "remarkable." He says, "People kept cows and planted gardens, and kept on playing baseball."

"Uncle Sam" was a man known and loved by many people. He had a happy disposition at all times. He was a painter and interior decorator by trade. In the winter time, he mined coal until he was hurt in a mine (a rock fell on him). He was a devout Christian. He enjoyed playing games with children and young people. Uncle Sam married Alice Rowley, a woman of pleasing personality. She helped nurse Grandfather Holstein, Grandmother Holstein and Aunt Sadie Redd until they passed away. Aunt Alice took care of Uncle Sam until the very end. Uncle Sam is buried in West Lebanon Cemetary.

Alice and "The Mister" joined a group calling themselves the Order Of The White Camellia. When they joined, they were under the impression it was a social club. At their first meeting they discovered it was a white supremacy group, and quickly disassociated themselves with it.

Child of EDNA CRAIG and EUGENE BARCLAY is:

27. i. RICHARD EDWIN⁶ BARCLAY, b. April 23, 1932, Apollo, PA.

17. ROBERT LEROY⁵ CRAIG (MARTIN BURTON⁴, CATHERINE ARNETTA 'NETTA'³ ANDERSON, CATHERINE² RAY, JOHN¹) was born May 28, 1910 in Parkwood, Indiana Co., PA, and died December 26, 1968 in Indiana, PA. He married HANNAH JEMIMA FLEMING June 22, 1933, daughter of HARRY FLEMING and MADGE HOLMES. She was born August 13, 1913 in Clymer, PA, and died July 21, 1982 in Indiana, PA.

Notes for ROBERT LEROY CRAIG:

Forced from the coal mines for health reasons, LeRoy and family moved from Kent to Indiana, PA and he worked on the Bennett Farm for a brief period of time. I, Robert Blare, was in the 3rd grade when we moved to Dixonville, PA. LeRoy then began to work for Beuheight Pyrofax Gas in Indiana, PA. He worked there until his death. Robert LeRoy [LeRoy] lived in Kent, PA. LeRoy & Hannah had 2 boys, Robert Blair & Kenneth Merle. LeRoy worked in the coal mines as an electrician unto such time as his health [black lung] forced him to look for other work. LeRoy and family moved from Kent to Indiana, PA and he worked on the Bennett Farm for a brief period of time. I, Robert Blare, we in the 3rd grade in school when we moved to Dixonville, PA. LeRoy then began to work for Beuheight Pyrofax Gas in Indiana, PA. He worked there until his death. He became ill with what the doctor told him was the flue. Thinking it was only the flue, he returned to work and succumbed to what turned out to be a heart attack, rather than the flue, and it killed him. LeRoy was quite active in his church, Calvary Baptist Church of Buck Run, PA. He was Sunday School Superintendent, a deacon and faithful member. They don't come any better.

Robert LeRoy Craig (1910-1968)

Kind, Gentle Warm, Understanding with enduring enthusiasm and determination.

Dad once spoke of working in the Coal Mines in his teenage years for 38 cents a day. This may go a way to explain his patience and determination to see things through to the finish – often with little reward.

I remember him in many ways – too numerous here to mention.

It was a privileged for me to have had the opportunity to work with dad on the job and one or two days in the most adverse of conditions talked about here might be the easiest way to recall for you just who LeRoy Craig was as a man.

The winters in Pennsylvania were at times quite severe. Weather conditions that would deter most of us from even going to work in the world of 2002 never kept dad from the job. I shall use one or two of these events here. It was sun-up and time to get ready for work. I don't know the exact day or year but it must have been the early 1960s. One look out the window revealed that there had been an awesome snow storm the night before. The car would have to be dug out, its roof barely viable as I peered out of the frosted over windows of the kitchen. I decided that it would be best to shovel the snow first then eat breakfast. I would then change into my warmer dry work clothes so as to take on the day.

I was just pushing my plate aside when I heard the snow plow pass by the house. Upon revisiting the kitchen window I could see that all my efforts at snow removal had just been completely un-done. I decided to put my work clothes on before going out again. On my way back in from the first shoveling experience I couldn't help but notice that the thermometer on the porch post hovered about as far down as was mechanically possible. The lowest position was about - 30 degrees. The fine snow I had shoveled and pushed aside earlier along with the squeaking sounds my boots made earlier confirmed what the thermometer had indicated was fact. It was well below zero. It may have not been -30, but it wasn't far from it. The wind was picking up and by the time we got in the car one couldn't even tell that the road had been plowed. We lived in Dixonville and worked at Pyrofax Gas in Indiana, PA. That was about 14 miles. It was doubtful that the roads would be plowed all the way there so we decided that it might be best to put the chains on the tires before starting rather than risking getting stuck and then having to do so.

Driving was slow and even though we had left 45 minutes earlier than usual we arrived at the dispatch office on time. Dad was always on time. He didn't seem to make a special effort to do so but I cannot recall a single time he wasn't were he wanted to be except that it was on time. It was a natural attribute of his. Mr. Beuheight told us to work together in that the going would be difficult. We left the office in Indiana and drove to the plant where the trucks were parked –outside and covered with snow. The old International tank truck would be difficult to start in this cold and as we approached it there seemed to be a look of defiance emanating from it's half covered hood. Dad finally got the Ford started and I only tried to start the International a couple of times knowing that it had no intentions of starting on its own. Saving the battery, I waited for Dad to pull around in front so as to connect the jumper cables. After this was done it still refused to start. As it turned out, Dad had to pull back around and back up so as to hook up the towing chains and try to start it that way. He pulled me out of the plant and to the road and was starting to pick up speed when the chain snapped. This was a very heavy chain and it was so cold that the chain snapped! We had used this chain a number of times and this was the first and only time that it had ever broken. We re-maneuvered and reattached the chain and tried again. Finally, after a time, the old truck started and after some resistance began its muffled purr back to life. The chains were already on her from the previous day and after returning the other truck to the plant we were soon on our way.

We only had one delivery with the bulk tank truck and that was to the Leuserne Mines near Homercity They used massive burners (designed and built by dad) to thaw the undercarriages of Coal Railroad Cars so they could dump the coal that fired the boilers – which in turn produced electricity. The trip was uneventful except for stopping a couple of times to clear the snow away from the radiator of the truck. The snow was so deep in drifted areas that it was not only difficult to see, but the front of the truck acted as a snow plow and the result was a clogging of the grill on the front. This was to be the easiest part of our day. We had to return to the plant and park the tanker and get in the other truck loaded with about 20 or so cylinders of LP Gas and do our best to deliver them.

Never even considering failure to accomplish our task ahead, we started with the will to make every delivery as scheduled. I will walk through one such delivery which I believe offers the best example of the kind of will dad, and me by his example, had. There was this one delivery that was about as far off the beaten path as one could imagine. Not only was it a long and desolate road back from "nowhere", but the home we were going to was at the end of a long drifted path. There was not evidence anywhere that anyone but us was on the road. Indeed, the one stretch of road just before the entrance to this lane, was fraught with its own challenges. Many times we would take a run at a hill or snow drift and go as far as possible. When the truck would come to a stop and the back wheels would begin to spin so as to bog down. We would stop, put it into reverse, and while leaning out the door, would back the truck up and re-try. Each such effort would eventually get us through only to have to repeat this over and over, sometimes having to get out and shovel the snow from beneath the truck and wheels so as to even be able to back up for another run. It was at the end on one such endeavor that dad told me that it was my turn to drive. As incredible as it seemed that he would ask me to drive in such a situation, the youth in me at the time caused excitement to warm my spirits. The snow that we had tracked in to the truck had covered the floor-board until it was its own icy challenge and I nearly slipped and fell as I chimed into the cab. I remember him telling me that once you commit to driving up the lane don't hesitate but keep it moving. As it turned out it took us four tries to get up the first hill on this narrow, drifted country lane. I only got stuck on two of the four tries and with his encouragement the last try was successful and we made it though and nearly bounced to a stop in front of the farm house. I did get a lecture about how I shouldn't have stopped where I did. It would be necessary to have to back up in the tracks we had just made and get a running start again so as to be able to drive up and around a circular drive enabling us to leave. The truck was overheating because the grill was once again clogged so we attended to that, shoveled some snow away from the back of the truck and then began what seems now to have been an impossible task. Dad dropped the LP gas tank off the back of the truck and made the observation that it would be useless for us to use the hand-truck to move the cylinder. He said that we would just get on both sides of it and pull it along on the snow. That sounds simple. However, the pulling would be up about ten steps and then a long gradual slope up to the back of the house. It seems that it was about sixty or so yards to where we needed to go. It felt like a mile. Both of us falling down a number of times. The warmth of our breath froze on the collars of our coats. We were sweating from the effort and the whipping of the wind ripped through the layers of clothes we were wearing causing us to chill. Back in the truck it took us about four tries breaking a path so as to get turned and back on the lane that would return us to the road. And, in short, we made all of our deliveries that day in much the same way.

Officially dad was considered a service technician for the Pyrofax Gas company. Realistically, he did it all. In repairing things he leaned more to exactly that. He would take it apart and repair it rather than simply replacing something. It didn't matter if it were a gas regulator, a gas stove, refrigerator or a heating plant. If something wasn't working as it should, – he would adjust or repair it. Today, we would just get a new one.

Robert LeRoy Craig died at 58 years old. The occasion was one of those situations that would have most of us recovering at home. He was at work installing a gas furnace in a church. He wasn't feeling well and went to the doctor. He was diagnosed as having the flue. He was told to go home and take medicine for a couple of days. Instead, dad returned to work the next day to finish installing the furnace so Sunday services could go on as scheduled. It turned out that he didn't have the flue but a heart attack – Massive in that he continued working after the first symptoms led him to the doctor. Dad died on the day after Christmas in 1968. It don't seem to me that it has been that long ago until I think about it. His kind of determination to see the job through seemed to die with him. Even in his day dad was a man that stood alone in the kind of person he was. . . . -- Bob Craig

Notes for HANNAH JEMIMA FLEMING:

Killed in Automobile Accident just north of Marion Center on the way to Rossiter, PA.

Hannah Jemimah Fleming Craig - Born near Clymer, PA - Early childhood raised on a farm not far from Clymer. She told of walking over the hill between the farm and Clymer - going down the hill was a huge rock - the size of a house. They used to climb over it, even after severe warnings from mother and dad. One day she fell off the face of the rock and never told parents for fear of punishment. Hannah, in her old age, told that her ever severer pain and problems with her back came about most likely from that early childhood experience.

In 1950 Hannah, her two sons, Kenneth & Robert, took a train trip to Phoenix, AR, to visit Uncle John Learn & his son, Blaine Learn. They stayed two months in Phoenix and then took the train to California where they visited with Charles Fleming. Charles was working at a saw mill there where they were harvesting wood from the red wood forest near-by. While visiting there Uncle Charles took them on a scenic visit to the Giant Red Woods forest. They saw all the giant trees like the one you could drive a car through. On the way back home they stopped at a stream and after watching her two sons play in the water, slipped her dress off and went swimming in her petty coat. Charles got a big laugh at that. It wasn't long after that visit that Charles and his family returned back to PA and settled near Rossiter, PA.

Robert LeRoy, who almost never showed any signs of poor health, died quite unexpected of a heart attack. Hannah never quite got over it and grieved until her death in a severe auto accident just north of Marion Center. She was reportedly on the way to Rossiter to visit with her brothers and father.

[Brøderbund WFT Vol. 4, Ed. 1, Tree #0066, Date of Import: Sep 25, 1998]

I was reading one of your posting and didn't realize that your mom had died in a car accident. That's sad. I remember hearing about your dad when he died. I think Cliff and I were living in Florida at the time. Isn't it interesting that of the large family of 11 Craig children, some of them died early (I think mostly of heart problems) and the others are still going strong. I know Cliff's dad was 54 when he died. Cliff was 51. Needless to say, my children are watching their health these days, cholesterol, etc.

Yes, Sue. Mom had just had an operation [gallbladder] and was doing poorly. Glenda, Roger & myself were in Loveland, CO. We had just started a mission there [Prairie Mountain - now constituted as a church], and mom needed us. So we stored all of our furniture and drove back to Virginia to take care of some things and were to go to PA and live in mom's house - she had moved into Ken's mobile home on the property there in Dixonville, PA, and we intended to look after her. I'll never forget the day [1 day after we arrived in VA] she was killed. Our car was in the garage being repaired [transmission replacement]. He had brought our Yamaha motorcycle on a trailer with us from Colorado, so we jumped on it and rode it to PA. According to the autopsy she had gotten a blood clot in her lung and the pain of it must have caused her to swerve directly into the path of an oncoming coal truck and it drove right over the car and her. She had just stopped in Dixonville and filled up with gas. The accident happened on the Punxsutawney side of Marion Center, PA. We can only suspect that she was on the way to visit her brother Charles Fleming in Rossiter, PA.

I have looked at so many photos of the Craig children. We have the oldest, the middle and the last children of MB Craig -- all women, still alive. I would love to drive to SC and visit my Aunt Edna. She wasn't at the reunion last year and I don't suspect that she will be able to make the trip this year. I just love all three! Age has a way . . .

When my Uncle Paul died it was a shock to everyone. As I understand it, he, that very day, had just had a physical and everything, including a cardiogram, was just fine. He was home sitting in his comfort chair and just died.

22. CATHERINE HAZEL B⁵ CRAIG (MARTIN BURTON⁴, CATHERINE ARNETTA 'NETTA³ ANDERSON, CATHERINE² RAY, JOHN¹) was born June 22, 1920 in Parkwood, PA. She married JOHN CLAIR RHEA August 15, 1940. He was born September 18, 1919, and died November 08, 1999 in Phoenix, AR.

Notes for JOHN CLAIR RHEA:

During the 1950s, Johnnie Rhea was visited often by Robert LeRoy Craig & sons. The Rhea farm was located far off Route 119, Willow Run Road towards Pollock Road, and then North. His farm was set on the side of a hill and there were many fields for cattle to graze. Surrounding his farm was forest and it was ideal for hunting. As boys, Ken, Ed Rhea & myself would play the part of hunting dogs. We would walk, run, make noise -- anything to roust rabbits, grouse and wring-necks for dad & Mr Rhea. This became a celebration every year at the beginning of hunting season and often we spent Thanksgiving day there where a morning of hunting would be followed by a feast of turkey that Hazel and mom would prepare.

Thinking of the farm brings many fond memories to bare.

The day came when Johnny began to be ill with a lung condition. The condition worsened to the point where the doctors suggested he would live longer if he moved to a dryer climate. So, the times were changing and Johnny advertised the farm for sale. It was so far off the road. Where would he find a buyer for a dairy farm that far away from everything. It was very hilly, and not much good for crops. It was difficult to harvest the hay to feed the dairy cows.

One day a visitor came to the door and it was an Amish-man from the state of Ohio. He ask about the farm and was careful to look every inch of the property over very closely. He seemed to like what he saw. Johnny had not long past improved the spring house and installed the state required equipment for a dairy farm in Pennsylvania. This included stainless steel milking machines, glass tubing to transport the milk from the cows into a milk room where he had installed a huge tank where the milk was separated and ready for a shiny stainless steel milk tank truck would come to pick up the harvest. There is no telling how much this cost, and the question was, how would he ever get his money back. He had tractors, combines, plowing equipment, everything needed to farm in a hilly countryside. It seemed daunting at the least.

Another afternoon, the visitor returned. He stated that the deal was accepted and he wanted to buy the farm. He carried a suit case and when he opened it Johnny saw what he wanted to see. It came, however, in a very unusual method. Not a check. It was a case full of money. I am unable to recall the amount paid for his farm, but it was enough to enable Johnny & Hazel (CRAIG) to move to Phoenix, Arizona, where he lived to a good age.

I remember Johnny coming back for dad's funeral, (Robert LeRoy Craig), and how it took everything he had to make it to the grave. Dad and Johnnie was very close and he was very moved at his death. As sick as Johnny was at that time (December 26, 1968), no one would have imagined that he would live until 1999.

Glenda, the boys & I returned to Pennsylvania, transferred by W.T. Grant Co., to work the new PUNXSUTAWNEY Super Grant City store. One day we drove by the old Rhea farm. We had learned that the Amish people that bought it had sold off all the machinery, the milk equipment, the electricity, plumbing -- all modern conveniences were taken out, ripped out of the walls of the house and barn, and they remodeled it back to the way it had originally been. A pioneer's delight of a farm. A wooden fence made out of split rails encompassed the entire front of the barn-yard. In fact there was 5 or 6 children cutting/mowing the grass all around the fence when we drove by. They were clothed in their custom black clothing, no buttons or zippers. It was remarkable. The farm would not have been recognized had we not known the location. This is not to say that Johnny didn't keep the place up. He did. It was always a beautiful farm. I have many numerous fond memories and will never forget the farm, Johnny, and all the wonderful experiences we had.

As an after-thought. The hunting with dad & Johnny. Today, they would likely arrest both my dad and he for placing their children in harms way. Why, that would have been child abuse. Kids today don't know what they are missing. These were some of the most delightful days of our lives!

23. SAMUEL WARD⁵ CRAIG (MARTIN BURTON⁴, CATHERINE ARNETTA 'NETTA'³ ANDERSON, CATHERINE² RAY, JOHN¹) was born February 24, 1925 in Parkwood, PA. He married HELEN ELIZABETH SCHIMMOLLER August 20, 1949. She was born August 24, 1927.

Notes for SAMUEL WARD CRAIG:

It was a surprise to get your letter. Helen said your long-term memory is good, as we had forgotten about the horn blowing at the RR crossing. Helen said I still do it. Is that "road rage"?:

Carolyn & Ron, and family have been doing well. Son Eric has completed college and is married. They are buying their home. Both he and his wife Beth work for Ford. Elizabeth has completed college, and is a Millwright Apprentice at Ford. She has an apartment of her own. Ellen has completed college, is married, bought a home, and has a son. Our first Great Grandson, named Michael Ward Furtney. Ellen's husband Matt was in the Marines 4 years before they were married. Both now work at Ford. In all, including Ron (with 30 years), there are six of them at Ford. Errol there youngest is still in college. Carolyn works at the local school as a teacher's aid, working with handicap children. Their whole family was at the Craig Reunion in PA in July, plus Colleen's Jenny. 13 of our family from Michigan. Carolyn is Secretary/Treasurer of the Reunion. Carolyn does have a problem with high Iron in the blood, Hemochromatosis, a generic defect that requires that they take blood on a regular basis to reduce Iron. Blood cannot be used for transfusions.

Colleen & Dave are also doing well. Jenny the oldest is in eighth grade, and involved with sports, soccer, basketball, and track. Dan is in sixth grade and is a whiz, also in sports, now limited to baseball and ice hockey, because he is on the travel hockey team, which includes games in Buffalo, and Chicago. Colleen works for Beige Bag Software Co, and Dave her husband works for Statprobe, which does statistical studies for Drug Companies

Ruth & Tom, and Hazel visited with us for five days the week before Labor Day. They are doing well. Ruth & Tom moved into a condo in Indiana. Hazel is back from Arizona (John died in 1999) and bought a home near daughter Patty, in Punxsutawney. Art is in St. Andrews Assisted Living in Indiana. Edna is in an Assisted Living Home in Aiken, SC. Dick lives in Aiken. Peg is also in an Assisted Living Home in Indiana. Fran (Bill's wife) and Betty (Pres's wife), are doing fair, each living at home. All of the above except Edna were at the Reunion.

Helen is doing fairly well, she has had a problem with Rapid Heartbeat, which awakens her at times, also has eczema, which is quite itchy. I am doing fairly well, had single By-pass operation in Dec 1999. NO heart attack. I wrote it all up for e-mail at the time, will dig it out and send you a copy.

I had been asking everyone if they had heard from you two. No one seemed to know. I saw Ken's three daughters this summer. I am in the Kiwanis, and we handle the parking and crossover traffic at the Michigan International Speedway near us. Ed Rhea had told them that we work at the racetrack. A couple of years ago Bev called, and asked if they could work for us. This would get them into the race. They have been here every year since, twice this year. In June there were 16 from Clymer, PA area, and 11 in Aug. that worked the race.

We had 59 at the Reunion this year. I updated the Family History in 2000 and added a flyer update (35 Changes) for 2001. If you are interested it is $3.00, including mailing . I have prepared a separate listing of 35 family members with e-mail addresses.

Love,

Ward & Helen

Notes for HELEN ELIZABETH SCHIMMOLLER:

Sue. I was thinking this morning that while answering your "Note" and that I left out Uncle Ward Craig. I recall Glenda, Jeff [just born] and myself going to Fort Wayne, Indiana, for work and I stayed with Samuel Ward for a couple of weeks. Carolyn & Colleen were toddlers. Helen was the greatest. She had Ward counting calories religiously back then.

On the other hand, even though I have had three goes with my heart and 2 angeplasty, I eat anything I enjoy and do other things that is not thought to be the in thing for this 21st cent. I do not count calories. I smoke a cigar when the mood strikes me, and even enjoy the pipe now and again. It has been my approach in life that if one can't enjoy the good things in life without worry, why live. I have lived a full and enjoyable life with some of its little hardships along the way. At 63, if it is my time to go, I'd rather go. I do not want to be a healthy vegetable for someone else to tend to. I just want to go

Robert Blair Craig - 'Walking Man' – The title of a song I recently heard on the radio. I think it best describes my life experiences. The day following my graduation from GT High School I left for Philadelphia, PA. My intentions were to work the summer and begin classes at Philadelphia Bible Institute. At the time I felt a sincere calling to the ministry. Summer over I began classes there but soon felt uncomfortable with the extreme fundamental teaching and before the end of the 2nd semester I left school and joined the US Navy. The Navy provided me with the 'Walking Man' transportation that started my long journey across the world. Boot Camp at Great Lakes, IL, communication school at Imperial Beach, CA, First stationed at Bremhaven, Germany, then Istanbul, Turkey; then on to the US Pocono and an extensive Mediterranean cruise. This Med. Cruise took me to Beirut, Lebanon, Naples & Rome, Italy, Tripoli, North Africa, the French Riviere, back to Istanbul, Turkey, Spain & two Atlantic Ocean crossings by ship and 3 in US Air Force Planes. I got to see the Statue of Liberty and spent a couple of weeks in New York City. All at the expense of the USN. This 'Walking Man' infection was complete and my wonders did not stop with my leaving the Navy. Glenda and I were married just three months prior to my discharge and we soon left Norfolk, VA, for Pennsylvania. Work was scarce in Norfolk as well as in PA, but after a time my dad got me a job with HJ Beuheight, Pyrofax Gas, Indiana, PA. Wages were small and life was meager there. Not long after Jeff was born we were encouraged by word that work might be available in Fort Wayne, Indiana. Uncle SW Craig's encouragement was appreciated as we moved and started work at Wayne Pharmaceutical Supply Co, Ft Wayne, IN. It wasn't long though that my imaginations and dreams provoked us to go to St. Petersburg, FL. Glenda and I both found work there at Dutch Pantry but after a while soon began to get homesick for family and Virginia. So, it was back to VA, then to PA. In Pa there was much family distress and we packed up again and left for the west. We stopped in Sulpulpa, OK and I found temporary work at Liberty Glass. A friend I worked with had a garage apartment to live in. This friend was very persuasive about certain job possibilities in Colorado and after about 3 months we left for Climax, Colorado to work in the mineral mines there. The money was good, but the winter severe. Roger came down with an acute sickness that the Company Doctor said would only get better at lower altitudes. We literally left that day for Phoenix, AR. With no planning, we were in the hands of providence. Uncle John Learn, a relative in my mother's side, Fleming, came to our aid and allowed us to stay with him until I could get work and a place to stay, about 3 weeks. I soon found work and we lived in Phoenix about a year. It was then back to Virginia. Prices Inc., an appliance retailer in Norfolk, VA became my real income job. I did quite well there and soon became manager of their retail outlet in Great Bridge, VA. We bought a home there and settled down for several years. I received a great job offer from the WT Grant Co. in Great Bridge and took it. It was a wonderful experience to be able to feel as though achievement and advancement was finally in my grasp after so many different job changes. The WT Grant Co. then transferred me to Punxsutawney, PA to assist in opening a new store there. Dad had passed away and mom was living alone in Dixonville, PA. We lived in the old home place there and I commuted to Punxey. After a couple of years there I was again transferred a new opening WT Grant Store in Richmond, VA. I worked there until WT Grant Co. went out of business. Ironically, after leaving Richmond, we returned back to the Norfolk, VA area, where Prices Inc., re-hired me. It was at this time I began to have a deepening sense of my calling to the ministry that took me to Philadelphia so many year before. I attended several different community colleges and after accumulating about 2 years of credits I attended the Southeaster Baptist Theological Seminary and received my degree, license and ordination there in Wake Forest, North Carolina. While a Southern Baptist Minister I was blessed to serve three pastorates, start Trinity Baptist Mission in Hollister, NC, accepted a call to travel to Fort Collins, CO to begin a mission work there, Parrie Mountain Baptist Mission, and then another Baptist Church in South Carolina. I began to be discouraged by the lack of support of the Southern Baptist Convention's support of my mission endeavors and left the SBC for the United Methodist Church. While serving pastorates in North Carolina I continued my education and graduated from the Duke Divinity School, Duke University, Durham, NC. In many ways I began to "burn-out." In 1992 I shared my feelings with the General Board of Pensions of the UMC and they agreed to retire me on disability. To begin the road to recovery we left NC for Texas and worked one year at Lake Colorado City State Park, Texas. One of the very best years of my life. I was somewhat able to get in touch a bit with myself and mostly with my God. We returned to VA were we have now lived for 8 years. We enjoy our boys, their families - our grandchildren!

1940's * Is it not true that our earliest memories sometimes are triggered by a sad event? My earliest memories are not of this new car - it was, however a car that ran over and killed my dog, Skippy, on the eve we celebrated the end of WW 2. That is how I will remember WW 2. It was also in this same car that my brother, Kenneth M Craig while 2 or 3 was in the back seat with me. The back doors opened forward and I shall never forget him accidentally opening the door and it pulling him out. Studied at Martin Community College, Liberty University and obtained my Degree in Divinity at South Eastern Baptist Theological Seminary, Wake Forest, NC. Advanced post graduate work at Duke University. Licensed at 1st Baptist Church, Plymouth, NC & Ordained at Stoney Hill Baptist Church, Wake Forest, NC. Later accepted into the United Methodist Church where I served.

Oh, Yes! And by The Way . . .

October 25, 2002

Just in case – If anyone is interested, here is how Glenda and I met . . .

Returning from a two year tour of duty in Turkey and the Mediterranean our ship crossing the Atlantic was tossed about, going through – not around, a hurricane. The captain didn't think it would be that bad, but the pounding broke the shell just in front of the "sail locker" area of the ship. The front flooded and we came limping into port sinking quite low in the front of the boat.

This meant we would need to make port in Portsmouth, Virginia. We were to learn that it would require about six months to repair the damage. I had a close friend, Charles Bogue who was married and already had his wife living in Portsmouth and he invited me to stay with them. That was a most generous offer. No one liked to stay aboard ship any more than was absolutely necessary so I accepted. That set me on a course that would lead to finding my soul-mate, Glenda Ann Carraway. It turned out that about the same time we arrived in Portsmouth, Glenda came to live in Portsmouth with her mother, Kathleen Caraway. This placed Glenda directly across the street from where we lived.

The occasion of our meeting was the day I decided to pull the Ford Thunderbird across a ditch in front of the house – leaving me enough space underneath to enable the changing of oil. I got the car saddled across the ditch and in my time of frustration I couldn't help but notice this sweet little girl across the street. She seemed to be having much pleasure at my distress. I don't recall the exact moment we were introduced, or how we met, but it was love at first sight. I knew . . . Glenda knew, and it has been that way ever since.

Of all the girls I had met before that day, none has had such an impact on me as Glenda. She is my life. I live for her.

I am unable to speak for Glenda, but she has said that the first time she saw that tall dark and handsome sailor she made up her mind that she would marry him.

Land Of The Pharos!

By bob craig

The time was during the late 1940's to early 50's. The place was Dixonville, PA. I am the son of Robert LeRoy & Hannah Jemima (Fleming) Craig. I was born in 1937 so my age at the time of this occasion was early teen.

Mother and I often had difficulties and these often ended in fits of rage. Because of her beliefs that the movie screen was the eye of the devil and later-on this belief moved to the TV and how it was Satan's way of influencing lives for the worse. I can't dispute this in that it really does seem that television and the theater have both dipped into the depths of depravity and show the world to be the lowest forms of humanity. However, in the case of the incident I record here it was my firm belief at the time that seeing the movie, "Land of The Pharos" would enhance my understanding of something that has intrigued me from as far back as my recollections will allow.

There was a small store in Dixonville called Profughi's. Mr. Profughi was a slight man of Italian descent and every one seemed to love him and his family. Victor Lawrence, his son, and I were in the same class at school. This was so from the time we moved to Dixonville and continued until our graduation at Green Township High School, Commodore, PA, in 1955. (See link above).

Mr. Profughi also owned the little Dixonville Theater next door to his store. I was never allowed to go to a movie as a youngster and was so threatened by my mother that as best as can be recalled I never stepped inside the door of that little theater even though Victor and I were close friends and he invited me many times. I had a sort of unreasonable fear about the place induced by warnings from my mother. I talk about this so as to introduce the main theme of the story. In class one day Victor told us about a movie that was then showing at his dad's theater. Victor gave a sort of report about the movie and when I understood that it was about the pyramids of Egypt and my childhood Bible teachings taught about Moses and the story of Israel in Egypt my curiosity was naturally inspired. Early on, long before my mothers beliefs became so radical, I do recall our school (likely 3rd grade) class was shown a movie of Hddie and her situation with her gradfather.

Oh, how badly I wanted to see that movie, the "Land Of The Pharos." I don't recall asking mom and dad about the possibility of going to see it, but the story here would indicate that it may be that I did. For some reason (not something I would normally do) I traveled to Indiana by my self. I seem to remember hitchhiking there from Dixonville. I don't recall where I acquired the money to go to the movie, but I do remember my first experience going there as I entered the theater for the first time in my life. Of course all the attractive trappings and lights fascinated me but nothing more than the big screen that revealed itself upon entering that large and imposing room. It had all the balcony seats in all their glorious upholstered beauty. It seemed that even the walls were upholstered as I recall.

The movie had already begun when I entered (it wasn't a planned trip) and I can recall catching my breath as the scene in front of me was quite more than life. It dawns on me that I must have been nearer the 15 years age in that I was able to completely understand the story and have such a clear remembrance of the movie and all the external sights I saw that night. I remember watching with interest all the efforts of building the pyramids and how they were (according to the movie) made in such a way so as to entomb all those that participated in its building and the burial of the Pharaohs.

It was some time after the movie was over that I was startled by a hand on my shoulder telling me that it was over and I would need to leave. It was then, and only then, that I realized that I had no plan. I had made the fourteen mile trip to Indiana, attended a movie but from there on, it finally dawned on me, I had no plan as to how I would get back home. It may be that I watched the movie more than once. As I recall it was daylight when I entered the theater and when I left it was dark. Another thing became quite a shock to me. Although I apparently had no difficulty in hitchhiking to Indiana when I left the movie theater there was so few cars anywhere to be seen. Therefore, and because of the lack of any traffic on the trip back to Dixonville, I assume that it must have been close to eleven or midnight when I left for home. As I walked down Philadelphia Street toward Dixonville a panic began to settle in. There was absolutely NO cars on the road. Even today (2003) I recall walking from Indiana, walking up the hill past Stonebrakers Apple orchards and barn and still no cars. There was not even the opportunity for me to vent my anger at a car that passed me by. There simply was none.

Although I began to think that my circumstances must be some sort of punishment from God for having gone to the movie it also occurred to me that time would pass more quickly if I re-played the movie in my mind. It was a very cold night and that was another thing that came to mind. I hadn't even worn a coat. It was a nice day when I left Dixonville. It was a very cool damp night as I placed one step in front of the other on my way back home fourteen miles. There were no sounds as I clearly recall. No birds, no dogs or no frogs. On I walked. It occurred to me that if I walked right down the middle of the road placing one foot after the other right on the traffic stripes that would surely bring on a car. It didn't, and I walked on.

I recall walking in front of my Uncle Carl Kunkle's home (about 3 or 4 miles out). It was dark. There would be Uncle Carl, Aunt Bertha & their three sons a bit younger than myself. I am not sure if it was pride, or if Aunt Bertha had by that time already divorced Carl, or why I didn't knock on the door. It may well have been pride. There would have been many laughs at me from Freddy, Russell & Lawrence had I have knocked on the door that hour of the morning. Besides, my memory allows a bit of understanding that I didn't want them to know the extent of my mothers control over my life.

On and on I walked. There was no fear that I remember, only the anguish at the awkwardness of my circumstances. Even though I was completely cognizant of the reaction to be when I arrived back home I felt no fear of that. Yes, there would be the usual screaming and yelling from mom and possibly a whipping. That didn't seem to be of concern as I recall. I don't even remember what did happen that morning when I got home. I do recall some sore feet the next few days. On and on I walked. I recall walking past several homes of folk I knew but it never entered my mind to wake any of them and then have to explain myself. I just walked on and on. The longest part of the walk was that from the foot of the hill on the Indiana side of Clymer into Clymer itself. I could see the lights of the town and even though I tried to pick up the pace the lights never seemed to get closer.

Walking through Clymer was a frustration in itself. I had never though Clymer to be such a big city as when it was that I had to walk through it that hour in the morning no one, nowhere . . . one foot in front of the other. I had harbored a glimmer of hope that maybe someone would be driving from Clymer to Dixonville and that they would see me, stop and give me a ride. What is so amazing about the whole thing there was never even one car that came by going from Indiana to Clymer or Dixonville. There, as I recall, was only two that were traveling toward Indiana during the whole time. In my mind my remembrance of that evening stops at the point I entered the village of Dixonville and passed Profughi's Theater. My memory of that walk ends there more or less where it started. There is no 'moral' to the story. It just comes to mind every now and then as I walk through life. Indeed, it would seem that the story itself is but descriptive of a lifetime of walking from one place to another. No real purpose. Just another journey. Why? I have not the slightest idea of why. Would I do it again at that age? Most likely. I shall never forget the thrill of seeing my very first movie. I shall never forget the story of the pyramids.

Dear Bishop Edwards:

Greetings.

First let me acknowledge that my medical condition causes me to be somewhat 'on-edge.' I have great difficulty controlling my emotions – part of the reason I have been on disability and am referred to as an "unfunded-mandate."

I don't know who to blame for my condition or situation. Myself, luck – or lack there-of, God or the devil. However, my situation is not likely to get any easier and that is my own fault – I suppose.

It is getting to the point in life that I hate to see anything addressed to me that is in any way related to the United Methodist Church. I mostly would enjoy an unexpected bill for goods or services than another notification from the UMC.

My wife and I have lived a life of torment since we were placed in our situation. In most cases we would have been better off had I chose to just disappear (as was my intention in 1992) from the scene when things began to go bad for me. Unfortunately, Thomas Holtsclaw (DS-Williamson) talked me into applying for and getting this debilitating disability leave (or what-ever). Every year we have went further into the vast darkness of the debt hole of despair. BECAUSE we were receiving your disability benefits (?) we did not qualify for any federal or state (SSI, food stamps, etc) assistance. Because of both of our medical conditions every year we ran up bills that we could not pay. Your CO-PAY plan has caused us to be an embarrassment to everyone around us and I feel like a thief in that there has been so many medical services we have been unable to pay for. Every year our medications alone (our portion of co-pay) has drawn us into the pit further and further. In all our medications run about $4,000 more than we have income to pay for every year.

For 25 years more/less we have had the wonderful service from a pharmacist in Pollocksville, NC, Allen Drugs. He has seen to it that our medications were delivered on time no matter where we have been. Some days ago I get ONE OF THOSE DREADED ENVELOPES with the UMC logo and after opening it found that we no longer could order our medications from him. We now HAVE TO order from this ridiculous outfit, TEL-DRUG. We tried them last year and after about 35 days had to call and cancel – our medications had run out and they still hadn't discovered which way was up. We called Allen Drugs in Pollocksville, NC and they were here over-night. Now, because of your prescription for paying the least possible amount for our health insurance we can no longer use him. This is not only EVIL, it is un-godly.

As soon as I received your notice on that change I began to try and get all loose ends tied up. I called our Doctor. He had to re-write all our RX. That caused confusion. Finally we were able to get our RX in hand and then fill out the forms, mail them to Tel-Drug, etc., etc. and on and on. Today I get a call from them. It seems as though my MC/VISA wouldn't approve the charges. I had to give them my CheckCard number. The charges of $183.92 will now come out of our dwindling checking account. This will cause our account to be overdrawn before the date of February's Social Security check arrives (3rd Wed. Of Feb.) Now you will say that this is not your problem. However, had I been able to work through my pharmacist the medications would have been here two weeks ago. He has always sent them and then billed me monthly. I was then able to hunt and peck around for ways to pay/charge them, etc.

When I got your dreaded notice that we would BE FORCED TO USE THIS TEL-DRUG outfit I decided to start cutting my personal RX in half. I have now cut or ceased taking about 2/3 of my personal medications. The pain I now suffer is nearly unbearable. My chest feels as though it is collapsing in on me. My blood pressure is up – I have that familiar ring in my ears. I feel I have no choice or alternative. I am unable to order and know what the charges will be from Tel-Drug and in that we will likely have to take the money from our checking account, I will have no idea what the charges will be until they are billed to my Check-Card. This is evil.

Friend, Mr Bishop, my wife and I would have been better off had you (The UMC) just cut me off completely from health insurance in 1992. We have been forced into the embarrassments of Bankruptcy through the courts two times since 1992. Our neighbor that was fortunate NOT TO HAVE HAD any relationship ever with the United Methodist Church in any form or fashion has the local pharmacy deliver to her home anything her doctor prescribes. All she has to do is sign the delivery slip. Everything IS taken care of for her. Every month a truck pulls up and fills her freezer provided by social services full of meat and vegetables. Of course your taxes pays her bill. But at least she gets her medications, food, lights and heat. In my case – I will not take any more medications in the hope that one of two things happen – preferably both. 1) Not taking my medications will hasten my death. And 2), as long as my wife is alive I will do whatever is necessary to see that she gets her needs provided for.

It is my strong opinion that the United Methodist Church is more concerned about it's bottom line than anything else. Go build another "HABITAT FOR HUMANITY!" – And, that the UMC only has done what it has for us, grudgingly, because it felt it had to. How many times I have made $40.00 more a month above the amount which would have qualified us for assistance or welfare of one sort or another. Now, believe me, – I would do anything, would have done anything – and will continue to do whatever it takes to see to it my wife is provided for.

We thought that from what we had understood and believed that the minuscule retirement funds that will be gifted our way in your generosity at the start of the new conference year would allow us to make some adjustments providing us with a somewhat cleaner start this coming June. WRONG! The generous United Methodist Church has had its lawyers draw up a carefully worded small print documents surrounding the lack of benevolence involved with the retirement that it is virtually impossible to understand. The real tiny small print will be the weight that is drawn around the neck of the UMC and like a millstone when it is dumped into the sea at judgement day. You will wish that the church never got involved in maneuvering around in the worldly forms of finance. I took our wonderful retirement plan to a friend of my sons, the financial officer of Wachovia Banking Services, and he thought it was the most treacherous trap of financial wizardry he had ever come across. The UNFUNDED MANDATE you have given me is fraught with traps that only serve to feed the beast in the likely event that I make the wrong choice. Calling my wife a CONTINGENT ANNUITANT was a stroke of genius for the evil fancier that set up the questionable benefits package. CONTINGENT what?

I said all of that to say this. We will likely lose our car, have to cut our food by one half, I'll have to cut off my medications completely and everything else (our splurging) . . . all because I move from disability retirement into "full retirement" this year. There are no alternatives other than for that of a fool that will do anything to help me in my situation. As I said above, I will be so much better off dead than a survivor under your PLAN.

My wife had emergency surgery at the local hospital about 2 years ago. Every day we get phone calls trying to collect that debt. Neither of us have gone to the hospital since – can't afford it, and they likely know that we can't pay the bill. I don't know what will happen if Glenda has to go again. There have been times in the past year that I feel she needed to go but wouldn't because of our PLAN. In recent months she has refused to go see her doctor. I canceled a bone density test that my doctor strongly recommended I have. We simply can't afford to live and most likely can't afford to die. I have an idea that there will be a Judgment Day with questions to be answered. I wouldn't want to be part of the PLAN (PROVIDER) when that day comes. There is simply no excuse for anyone to be treated in this way. Talk about falling through the cracks in life. We have done it – not because I am lazy and won't work and want a free ride. After 3 heart attacks and serious back surgery I am totally disabled. It is painful for me to sit at my desk long enough to write this letter. I have had to do it in days rather than minutes. It is because of the way the PLAN has seen to it that we have been trapped into a system that has no soluble answers that has forced me to write this letter. I write not in anger or rage – only in the depths of hopelessness.

If this day marked the crossing of the Rio Grande by Robert & Glenda (say illegals from middle America) we would find ourselves better cared for in our helpless situation. If the state tried to force them back across the border the UMC would be there proud and demanding for humane treatment and welfare for them. I suppose that is good – simply because they are part of the human family. What, though, does that make us?

I don't know that there is anything you would, can or would do if you could.. I just thought that someone should let you know (on paper) that your PLAN is the most destructive thing that has ever come my way in life. You need to do something about it. If you can't afford to take care of your people you need to get out of the people business.

I don't know why I have bothered to write to you concerning this. Do I expect assistance in any way? Not likely. Do I think you will revamp your insured system of unconcern? Not likely. Will you pray for us? Highly unlikely. . . . I just don't know. I feel as though I have been sleeping with the devil and will never be able to get the stench out of my bed clothes. In other words, I have made my bed and will have to sleep in it. However, know this, Glenda and I shall continue to pray for you and yours.

Most sincerely, and heart-sick,

Robert B Craig

PS: Regrettably I neglected to offer our most illustrative example of neglect we suffer. Our great PLAN offers a Dental BENEFIT.

What an over-statement. "Benefit!" Nearly four years ago I had a top side tooth to break in half. It was jagged and rough requiring immediate attention. It had scratched and caused infection in the top right inside cheek area. After looking at what was left of the tooth and how it would affect the wearing of what is left of my top partial plate he strongly recommended that it not be pulled. It was one of only two other teeth that the plate was supported by. He seemed sensitive to my plight concerning finances however informed me that due to the fact that I had "Dental Insurance," I would be required to come up with half of the cost of rebuilding the tooth. This turned out to be exactly $400.00 for one tooth. Had I NOT had insurance he might have been able to find a dentist that would work with a minister needing immediate care. In my case, before he would do anything for me he wanted the $400.00 up front. I went to my bank (been dealing with them for more than 25 years) and requested help. Understandably they refused because of my bankruptcy (bankrupt because of previous years of medical bills). I had to beg and after telling me he'd rather not, he finally gave in and loaned me the money. Four years – and I am still repaying for that. While in the dentists office I was told that there were four other top teeth (out of the 5 left) that needed immediate care. I knew that because when I run my tongue across the base of them I can feel the cavities. Also, after eating I have to take a tooth pick and one at a time clean the food from them. Since then, two of the five have broken off immediately below the gum line. The pain is at times severe and the swelling at times causes me to not be able to chew and eat. I have to withstand the pain in that Glenda's teeth are in worse shape. Neither of us can stand the pain of wearing our partial plates for any length of time. I have one tooth in front that is decaying. The other of the two front uppers is one of those broken off. My top plate will not stay in now that the support of that front tooth is gone. In that I feel that time is not on my side there seems to be no reason for me to even go through the anguish of trying to find the money to get them taken out and the others worked on. I wouldn't want to wish the pain on even Saddam Hassan or Osamu Bn Laden. No human being should have to endure this. If a family pet were to suffer the pain my wife suffers one would have the pet put down. If we were both put down it would be a windfall for the United Methodist Church in that they would be free from paying retirement funds. It seems to me that that would be the best out come all the way around. God must have his reasons for keeping us both around. I just wonder what His reason is.??

He married MYRNA ELLEN CHURCHILL June 30, 1962. She was born March 26, 1943 in Marion Center, PA.

Notes for MYRNA ELLEN CHURCHILL:

Bev forwarded your email to me thinking we may be able to help with the info re the Fleming side of the family. I don't know how much help we can be, cause as you are very much aware of, we are not to good about keeping up with our relatives.

I don't know if you were contacted about Aunt Penny's death. She died September 22. She died very suddenly. Was in the hospital about 2 weeks. Punkin told us that she was having problems breathing and was taken to the hospital. Her lungs were so bad that the doctors could do nothing so she was sent to Pittsburgh. That is where she died. She was always very thin but he said she only weighed 88 pounds when she died. We did get to see some of the family at the funeral. Aunt Tootie was there. I think she looks really good but she has to carry oxygen with her. Fred Kunkle was there also. He told us that Russ had found out just 2 days before that that he has cancer of the pancreas. I will try to get you Punkin's address or email, if he has one. He would be the likely one to contact about the Flemings.

Now that I have told you all the wonderful stuff, how are you and Glenda? Think of you very often. Ken doesn't do much on the computer except get some NASCAR results if I'm not around. I have made it easy for him to access that info if I'm not here. We are both in good health except for the aches & pains of getting older.

Bev also forwarded your web page to us. It was very interesting. I had not seen some of the pictures of the kids that you had on it. Really takes a person back a few years.

You can email me anytime, I'm on a lot. Email address is m_ecraig@yahoo.com

Notes for CLIFFORD DEAN CRAIG:

By MARY ANN SLATER
Gazette Staff Writer

Helen "Betty" Craig can still recall the days when her son Clifford would sit in her home in Parkwood and build models with his erector set.

She also remembers how Cliff, when he was a teenager in the mid 1950s, transferred his passion for making models into a love for building houses.

"He helped my brother build houses on the weekends and in the summers while he was in high school," said Betty Craig, of dark Avenue in Indiana.

Cliff Craig's love for building never wavered during his 51 years of life. Hours before he died last March, he was with one of his sons, inspecting the construction of the $73 million Spring Hollow water project in Roanoke County, Va. Craig, then the county's utilities director, had been in charge of the project's construction for the past six or seven years, and had even designed the project's water treatment plant.

"He was a very dedicated, no nonsense employee ... who would just bury himself in his work," said Gary Robertson, current utilities director for Roanoke County, "He worked 24 hours a day. There's no telling how many hours he put in on this project."

"He was one of the smartest, most intelligent men I've known," said Lee Eddy. Eddy is a member of the Roanoke County Board of Supervisors, which hired Craig in the mid 1980s. "He was very positive, very confident of what he was doing." Cliff Craig was always confident of himself, his twin sister Carol Bishop, of Indiana, said recently.

Carol Bishop and Cliff Craig were born in 1942 in Indiana. Both graduated from Indiana Area Senior High School in 1960. Bishop remembered growing up with her brother.

"I didn't realize just how smart he was," she said. "He never had to bring books home. If he made his mind up to do something, he'd do it."

"I had him in a science class and he was an outstanding student," said Harold Grove, a retired teacher from IAHS. "He had a keen scientific mind, and was always interested in the subject."

But it wasn't just science Craig was interested in. He was a championship wrestler in 1959-60, even making it into the state finals, Bishop said.

After graduating from IAHS, Craig joined the Navy, where he was a chief petty officer for 10 years. In the early 1970s, Craig went on to Penn State University, where he majored in civil engineering. He spent about 10 years working on water projects in central Pennsylvania before becoming director of utilities for Roanoke County in 1985.

A major part of his job as the county's director of utilities was supervising the construction of the Spring Hollow water project. The project involves pumping water from Roanoke River into the Spring Hollow Reservoir. The reservoir covers a surface area of approximately 160 acres and contain 3.2 billion gallons of water, enough to last the county for the next 50 years. "The dam and the pumping station were designed by a consulting firm and it was (Craig's) job to oversee the work," Eddy said.

But Craig thought he could do more.

He started checking into the design of the proposed water treatment station that would accompany the project, and he had some questions about its usefulness. He proposed an alternative treatment method, which had been used before in small treatment plants throughout the United States and which used fewer chemicals than conventional methods. The method removes small particles of sediment from water through two filters. One of the filters contained plastic chips, the other granulated coal.

But Craig's proposal met an early roadblock. The treatment plan he proposed had never been used in Virginia, and the state health department refused to accept data from other states to prove the validity of the method.

Craig was undaunted. While the dam was being constructed, Craig and his son set out to give the health department some data it could work with.

"He had to prove to them it would work. He and his son Matthew drew up the plans for it," Bishop said. They then set up a small-scale model of the water purification method in the family's kitchen. The model included a toilet-tank float to control the water level in the model.

Craig then persuaded the Roanoke County Board of Supervisors to give him $150,000 to build another demonstration project. This one was built in an abandoned barn located near the Roanoke River, Bishop said. Craig gutted the barn and put up new panels all around the sides.

"They put computers in there that ran 24 hours a day," Bishop said. For seven months, Craig and his staff pumped water from the river through a stainless steel tank. Dozens of gauges analyzed the water for clarity and chemical content.

Craig's hard work and perseverance paid off. The state health department accepted his data, and approved the water treatment method proposed by Craig. He then went on to design plans for construction of the treatment plant.

"It was almost entirely his baby," Eddy said. "Based on the design on (Craig's) treatment process, there was a substantial savings in the project cost." Some reports have said that savings will be as high as $12 million, but Eddy could not confirm that.

Eddy said the board of supervisors expected water rates to increase to help pay for the project. "We are hoping that, because of the savings we realize, we might not have to raise the rates as much as we thought."

Construction of the dam was winding down shortly before Craig's death in March. In late February, the pumps began channeling millions of gallons of the Roanoke River into the dam.

On Saturday, March 26, Craig was visiting the dam site with one of his sons when he became ill. He and his son returned home where he collapsed with a heart attack. He died later that day.

"After he died, the board (of supervisors) was looking for a way to honor his memory," Eddy said. Last summer, they found one. In August, the board dedicated The Clifford D. Craig Memorial Dam and presented an original painting, which was commissioned by the supervisors, to the Craig family.

Betty Craig said that, for years, she had known how important the dam project was to her son. "He would tell you every little detail it. He wanted to tell you every little thing about it even though it was all Greek to me."

But, Betty Craig said, she didn't realize how important Cliff was to the project until the dedication ceremony. She said she was pleased to hear the speakers talk so highly of her son's service and dedication.

"And one man said, 'If Cliff was here now, he wouldn't have stood for any of this pomp. He didn't want any credit for himself.' " But Robertson, who took over as utility director for Roanoke County when Craig died, gave his predecessor a lot of credit. "He left mighty big shoes for me to fill."

Eddy said water from the Roanoke River is still being pumped into the dam. Construction is expected to begin on the water treatment plant in a few months, and should be completed within 12 months.

I spent a year working at the Muncy State A Two Boss Family! Married 18 Years, Divorced 1981 SUSAN C. CRAIG 1. 41 West Palm Drive, Margate, FL 33063

My daughter, Julie, sent me your web site regarding the Craigs. I'm glad someone is taking time to do this. I started on the Craig ancestry about 30 years ago and found it so fascinating. Peg Craig (Merle's wife) and I exchanged a lot of information. Then I got busy with more children, going back to school and a job, so I packed it all up and haven't opened it since. But I still have the stuff.

If Ward is your uncle, who is your dad or grandfather? I grew up with the Craigs, as I dated Clifford Craig from the time I was 13, then married him when I was 19 (1963). So I attended all the family picnics and used to know everyone. Clifford and I were divorced in 1981, but because of my children, I've stayed in touch with the family. In fact, Carol, Clifford's twin sister, is still a good friend of mine. I just have to figure where you fit in.

Oh, I just looked at the ancestry page more and see that you are Kenny's brother, right? I'm sure I meant you somewhere along the line, but because Kenny was closer to our age, I know him and Myrna better.

Thanks for your good work,
Susan Clark Craig

TWENTY-NINE YEARS A PENN STATE STUDENT, PH.D. IN HAND AT LAST

University Park, Pa. - When Susan C. Craig receives her Ph.D. in Administration of Justice on May 11, she will do so not just with the satisfaction of graduating from Penn State at the same time as her youngest child, but also with the priceless joy of not getting another tuition bill for herself for the first time since 1973.

Craig, 57, formerly of Centre County, is program chair of Kaplan College's Online School of Criminal Justice in Boca Raton, Fla., and says she has been continuously enrolled at Penn State for what could be a record-breaking 29 years. Along the way to her Ph.D., she worked in a handful of Penn State offices, raised five children who all attended Penn State, and earned her associate's degree in Letters, Arts and Sciences in 1982; bachelor's degree in Individual and Family Studies in 1987; and master's degree in Counselor Education in 1991.

"I want to say 'thank you' to Penn State and to the many who encouraged me along the way," Craig recently wrote to Penn State President Graham Spanier. "A staff member of the Registrar's Office told me in 1992 that I had the longest record of continuous enrollment back then. Since I have remained enrolled, I have to assume that I still hold the record. However, I am pleased that I will not be paying tuition after Spring 2002, more so than holding this record."

Some 10 years before beginning her affiliation with Penn State, Craig, a native of Indiana, Pa., and the youngest of six children, studied business at Robert Morris College, in suburban Pittsburgh, but did not earn a degree there. Her father was Judge of Indiana County for 20 years, which she says led to her interest in the criminal justice system, as well as chances to "play" in the courtroom. She first registered for a pilot project Penn State Distance Education course that was delivered by computer in 1973, and went on to complete 21 credits through Distance Education. At the time, she and her first husband, now deceased, owned and managed the Craig Motel on Route 220 in Centre County. Later, she became a full-time Penn State staff member and enrolled as a part-time student.

"My goal was to provide my children with an education," she says of the 17 years that she worked for University offices in the College of Health and Human Development, College of Engineering, Student Aid, Graduate School, Center for Academic Computing and College of the Liberal Arts. "My eldest became a freshman in 1982. My youngest, Chad, will graduate the same day as I do with a bachelor's degree in psychology, and that will make three of my children who ended up earning a degree from here. Chad starts medical school in the fall. It is very exciting to me for us to graduate together, as it ends an era for me."

Besides her youngest, she expects at least two of her other children and a handful of other family members to see her cross the Rec Hall stage on May 11.

Craig's research for her dissertation focused on women in prison. The co-chairs for her dissertation committee were Alan Block, professor of Jewish studies and of crime, law and justice; and John Kramer, professor of sociology and of crime, law and justice. During her studies, she spent a year working at a State Correctional Institution in order to learn more about the family dynamics of women in prison, what happens to their children on the outside, and the administrative structures of prisons.

"She really exemplifies the notion of education and its place in workforce development, and the concept of lifetime learning," says Eva J. Pell, vice president for research and dean of the Graduate School at Penn State. "Clearly, by being a student for so many years, her education was a constant benefit to the many positions she has held."

Among other experiences, Craig has also been a census taker, management information systems coordinator for Women in Distress of Broward County, Inc., in Florida, an instructor for classes in Penn State's Administration of Justice program from 1995 to 1998, and holder of various counseling, consultant and volunteer positions with the University and Pennsylvania prisons.

"Now I enjoy encouraging other adults to go back to school if they want to--to let them know it is possible," she says.

Penn State's University Park campus will hold its Spring 2002 commencement ceremonies for approximately 6,222 associate, baccalaureate and graduate degree students the weekend of May 10-11. The Graduate School ceremony will be held at 6 p.m. Saturday, May 11, in Rec Hall for approximately 729 master's, and 226 doctoral degree students. Systemwide, Penn State expects 8,931 students to graduate from its 24 locations.

Hi Bob,

Got to see Sandys sister Connie at the Barr reunion. Maybe she will come next year. Really enjoyed being back there and seeing everyone after probably 35-40 years. Funny how time flies and as we get older seems to fly faster.

Take Care,

Also have one of Barbara somewhere,

Bill

Notes for SANDRA JEAN BARR:

Hi Bob,

This is so funny, I purchased an old set of the History Of Indiana County Pa off the internet about a year or so ago and the RHEA in the index has a pencil mark beside it then on down further it has one by Joseph. What are the chances. I would assume this book at one time belonged to some interested in the Rhea family of Indiana County. There were a bunch of them.

Supposedly the borough of Barr Slope was our GGrandfathers farm at one time till he sold out to the coal mines. I have the Barr family on Family Tree Maker if you have that program and am putting the outline more or less on a little paper to take to the reunion with me. Wish I had a lap top, something to work for in the future. I was born in Barr Slope and spent many summers back there with my grandfather and grandmother Barr. I have been talking to Connie Little which I believe is Sandys sister. I hope to update some of my information at the family reunion. I will forward you some of what I have right now and if you can't understand it let me know. Wm. Barr had two wives, our grandmother Margaret Palmer died young giving birth. He then married a Margaret Lydic and they had two children that I know of. He and Margaret Palmer had four. Here is a brief outline of what I have.

Let me know if this helps and I do have much more to enter...

Bill

Notes for CAROLYN ANN CRAIG:
December 2001

Greetings to Everyone,

It is amazing to think back over the year. There are so many things that have happened. At the same time, life has seemed to stay the same.

Our church has gone through changes. We have a new Pastor now. He and his wife moved from Montana. The church feels more complete when we have a Pastor to shepherd us.

Ron and Carolyn's highlight was a vacation trip to Florida and the Bahamas for 9 days in June. It was a wonderful trip. The weather was wonderful, and it was neat to see the palm trees and other lovely things. The turquoise water was bath temperature! We came back home appreciating our own vehicle after having to use so many different types of transportation. In July, the whole family was able to go to the Craig Reunion in Pennsylvania. On our way, most of us went to the Six Flags Amusement Park in Ohio and had fun.

Ron and Carolyn are still working on many projects around the house. We have a new steel barn almost enclosed. We have a pool fence almost completed. Ron replaced the Great room ceiling, and we have the trim work yet to do. All the projects are very nice.

Ron still works at Visteon and has completed 30 years! Now, his job involves working more with suppliers. Ron goes to Tecumseh many mornings to help the supplier solve their problems. I still work as an instructional aide at Britton Schools. I have worked with one handicap boy for 7 years. I work at school until 1:40 p.m., and then I baby-sit our grandson, Michael, until about 4:50 p.m. It is a wonderful schedule.

We have enjoyed our family and sharing in our adult children's lives. We have fun with our grandson and watching him grow up. The family meets together for Sunday dinner at 1:00 p.m. It is a special time of sharing.

Eric and Beth have enjoyed their house that they have lived in for the past year. They have a very nice home in a subdivision in Ypsilanti but they are not too far away. They are both working day shift. Beth still works as a Computer Aided Designer at Visteon Climate Control Division. Her job is to design temperature controls and air handling systems. The engineers are always making changes then Beth makes changes to the design on the computer. Eric works as a manufacturing planning and logistics person for Ford Motor Company. He works with suppliers to order parts and solve problems. Eric and Beth have just joined the First Presbyterian Church of Saline, and we are happy for them.

Liz is doing very well. She is a millwright apprentice at Rawsonville Visteon Plant. There are many hours and classes required toward becoming a journeyman, and she has almost completed the requirements to be a millwright. She has worked many shifts but now she is on day shift. Liz lives in a lovely apartment in Belleville. Her boyfriend is Shane Nowling, and he is very nice. He is an electrician apprentice in Ann Arbor. Liz had a wonderful vacation this year also. She went to Florida and the Bahamas in May.

Matt, Ellen, and Michael are busy as always. They have lived in their home for over a year and have enjoyed it. They live in the small country town of Deerfield. They both work at Rawsonville Visteon plant, and have a long drive to work. Matt works on the line and is the co-chairman of the Veterans committee. Ellen works in the finance office as a financial analyst. She has also started cake decorating, and she is very good at it. Michael has grown strong, tall, and healthy. He is 16 months old and is in size 3T clothes. He is very sweet, and we love to spoil him.

Errol is working hard. He is going to Eastern Michigan University, and has about one year until he graduates. He is studying business management. He also works at the Heath Farm. They finished harvesting in November. Errol's girlfriend is Christy Bells. She is a lovely girl. She is a senior at Tecumseh High School. She also works in the office at Lenawee Vocational Technical School. This year Errol bought a very nice car and is establishing good credit.

We are thankful for our family and the many blessings that we have been given by God. One sad thing that happened this year was that Ron's mother passed away on Ron and Ellen's birthday in March. She is happier now but it is hard to believe that she is gone. We miss her. Carolyn's parents are doing well, and so are Carolyn's sister and family. We get together at holidays and birthdays, and it makes a group of about 20 people. It is great fun.

May you have a fun holiday season. Although it is hard to keep traditions, hold onto the good ones. Ron and I have been working on accepting life's changes with a good attitude. It makes life more fun. We are thankful for Jesus Christ's birth, and we are glad to be able to celebrate it.
Sending Jesus Christ's Love,
Ron, Carolyn, and Errol

To those we want to share,

We want to share the joys and blessings of the year with you. We have a lot of the preparations for Christmas well underway. We started buying gifts in the summer. We found that starting early helps to alleviate the stress. It is fun when our family gets together to make and share cookies. And then there are the Christmas programs to help us to reflect on Christ's birth.

Matt and Ellen received a precious bundle at the birth of their second child, Evan Matthew Furtney, on November 14 at 8:23 p.m.! He was 9 pounds and 4 ounces and 22 inches long. He is an alert and happy boy. Matt's Mom, Liz, Carolyn's Mom (Helen) along with Matt got to witness the delivery. November 14 is also Carolyn's sister's birthday and the anniversary of day that Ron's Dad was welcomed into Heaven. Evan's older brother, Michael, loves him. Michael has grown a lot this year. He turned 2 years old in August. He is very active and intelligent. Matt is co-chairman of the Veterans' committee, and they do a lot of charity work for the community. He works for Ford Motor Company. Ellen works for Visteon Corporation. She is taking time off work until the middle of February. Matt and Ellen went to the Bahamas in July for their 3rd wedding anniversary. They had a good time in the sun.

Liz and Shane (Liz's boyfriend) have been dating for over one year. Shane became a journeyman electrician this year. Liz will become a journeyman millwright within a month. Liz works a lot of hours for Ford Motor Company at the Rawsonville Plant. Liz and Shane took a class in scuba diving and became certified. They went to Honduras with their class, in September, and had a great time diving and exploring the reefs.

Eric and Beth are working hard at Dearborn Ford Motor Company and Visteon Climate and Control Division respectfully. They are also taking Master classes in engineering management. They took a trip, last May, for their 4th wedding anniversary. They enjoyed themselves at Mammoth Cave in Kentucky. They had to put a new roof on their house. It looks great and does not leak. They are both enjoying life.

Errol and his girlfriend, Christy, have been dating for over 2 years. They are both in college. Errol will graduate in April with a Bachelor of Arts degree in Management. Errol would like to get a job with Ford or Visteon but he is not sure that it will happen right away. He is still working at Heath Farms. He earned his CDL (Commercial Drivers License) to be able to truck grain to market. The job works well around his schooling. Christy is going to Jackson Community College and has transferred to Washtenaw Community College for next semester. She has a good job as a secretary in a school office. Errol and Christy took a trip last summer and visited friends and relatives in Missouri (St. James and Branson), Louisiana, Georgia, the Carolinas, and Ohio. They are both busy but doing well.

Ron and Carolyn are enjoying life. They celebrated their 30th wedding anniversary with a wonderful dinner that their children prepared for a large group of friends and family. Ellen made an exact duplicate of their wedding cake! Ron is working at Rawsonville Visteon Plant for his 32nd year. He is active in church as Deacon, Awana Commander, and helping as needed. Ron is always improving our home with the many projects that he has going. Carolyn is still working at Britton Macon School. She is busy at church with several activities. She enjoys babysitting Michael, but she has not had him every day since Ellen went on maternity leave. Ron and Carolyn along with the family took our regular trip to the Craig Reunion in Pennsylvania in July. We also enjoyed Niagara Falls on our way to Pennsylvania. Carolyn's parents are doing well and enjoying life.

We are looking forward to the holidays. It is fun to remember Christ's birth with gifts and special treats. It is also special to share in Church activities and family gatherings. We pray that your Christmastime is not stressful, but is a fun time to remember Jesus Christ's birth.

Sending God's Blessings to All,
Ron & Carolyn

Notes for COLLEEN ELIZABETH CRAIG:

Bob,

The web site looks GREAT. Thank you for all your work.

My sister is listed as Sackett Craig, Carolyn Ann and I am listed as Craig Thurston, Colleen Elizabeth. I think that they should be done the same way. It looks like you are doing Maiden Name then Married Name. If so, my sisters needs to be switched.

I have some additions to the web page. You might have this info. from my dad (your Uncle Ward).

Coulter Holstein, Martha Myrtilla - Born July 24, 1847

Coulter, Samuel - Born Oct. 6, 1816

His parents are:

Coulter, William - Born Nov. 4 1792 Died in 1871

Sutton Coulter, Sarah - Born Jan. 6, 1797

Colman Coulter, Sarah - Born 1817

How much information so you want for people that marry into the family. Such as my mother's side or my husband's side. Or are you not going to include this information.

Thank you,

Notes for JEFFREY KENNETH CRAIG:

Jeff is a quiet boy that loves his children very much. Most of his life is built around them and he sees to it that they take part in all the activities they wish. He has worked for the same company for several years now and travels the state of Virginia, and even some neighboring states, supervising several crews of construction workers. If you ever visit Hampton, Virginia Beach or Norfolk Virginia, you will most likely walk on Pavers he has had placed. They use them for road ways, walk ways [Virginia Beach Board Walk), etc. Nearly all of the Board Walk on Virginia Beach is paved by Westcon. Besides, he is our son and we know he is special and we love him very much.

Notes for ROGER TRENT CRAIG:

Roger is his own man. By that, I mean, he is special in every way. He has worked for years at the Newport News Ship Building and Dry Dock [now called by another name which I can't think of at the moment]. He is seen by them as being special. They send him often to Hawaii to work on Aircraft Carriers in need of repair there.

Robert B Craig

June 25, 2002

Dear Roger, Kris & Ryan:

Today, for some reason, I have had my mind captured by memories of you all and how I have a treasure in you all. It is a treasure that no amount of money could buy.

I was thinking about my dad, and how it was that one just knew there was a deep abiding love in his heart and mind. He never spoke about it. I just knew it was there. My mother was even more difficult to understand when it came to thoughts of love. Often things she said and did would lead one to imagine there was little love there. She may have got this from her mother and dad. They were of the depression here in the USA and had to be tough. They also had a large family to feed – that may have contributed to their apparent inability to express love. And of course, dad [Robert LeRoy Craig] was one of eleven children – all a product, or affected by, the Great Depression.

I said all of that to tell you that I know my emotions over the years has been, at best, difficult for others to understand. I have great difficulty expressing my appreciation for your love and thoughtful things you have done – expressions you have been able to show visually that pointed to your love and respect. There has never been a birthday, father's day, Christmas or Easter that, along with other times, that you haven't expressed this thoughtfulness in a wonderful way. My life has been made wonderful by your timely expressions, yet, I have been unable to make my feelings apparent in an obvious way. I hope you have a way of sensing that – understanding that I have always appreciated and have been deeply moved by your wonderful care and love.

I really appreciate the way you have always taken the time and shown your caring to mom. I have also, even though many of your phone calls have been to her, appreciated and felt the warmth of your call as though it were to us. My, having problems expressing myself, response personally would have been of few words. So, I just wanted you to know this. Mom and I really do appreciate and look forward to the phone ringing and it being a call from Roger or Kris! I can't tell you what it means to look around our humble home and see things on the wall, on the tables, the little hearts, outlines of fish with little messages of love and care from you all. I'm sorry, but I am teared up because of your expressions of love. One thing I feel certain of is that if God takes me first mom will be cared for by the best. . .

I just wanted you to know this. This is a weak, but noble, attempt for me to express my genuine "Thank You" for all that you do and have done over the years. You guys are the best.

Love!

Thanks for sending me the link to the family page. Just a few things: #1. My middle name is Lara, not Laura. Everyone messes it up, so no big deal. #2. Why do you list some people that marry into the family as children and not others? Just thought it might be less confusing if you listed only the children in separate blocks and listed those that marry in in the blocks with their spouse. Just thought that might help. Also, I will try to see what I can do about getting you pictures of my section of the family (Arthur Gerald Craig).

Thanks again,

Notes for JENNIFER LYNN REDINGER:

My name is Jennifer Redinger Burton.

I am Gary Redinger's daughter and Ruth Redinger's granddaughter. I have 2 ammendments to the website.

1.) I am not listed as on the site. I am married to Clifford "Cliff" Ray Burton. We have a daughter Isabella Grace Burton.

2.) The picture for my uncle Tommy is incorrect. It is a picture of my Grandfather- Thomas Redinger.

I would appreciate it very much if this were updated. Thank you. Uncle Ward gave out a newly ammended family history at the reunion this year, maybe you can get one from him.

If you need any more information, you may email me back.

Thanks and God Bless,

Jennifer Burton
